

"The Mortar Of Assimilation And The One Element That Won't Mix," Puck, June 26, 1889.

Flag-waving students turn out for a Clean Up Our City rally in Dearborn, 1994.

February 21 -
July 5, 2009

IMMIGRATION AND CARICATURE:
Ethnic Images from the Appel Collection

A COMMUNITY BETWEEN TWO WORLDS:
Arab Americans
in Detroit

Pursuing Dreams,
Creating America's Future

IMMIGRATION AND CARICATURE: Ethnic Images from the Appel Collection

The history of immigration and its social impact in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries is examined through the popular media of that time. This exhibition explores the role of caricature and ethnic stereotype in forming American values and attitudes about the multicultural development of the United States. It utilizes a collection of immigrant and ethnic caricatures from popular graphics dating primarily from the Civil War to World War I, a period of massive migration to the United States. To modern Americans, the contents are sometimes humorous, sometimes very disturbing. Nevertheless, the collection offers great insight into American cultural attitudes and is a remarkable resource for the study of American cultural history.

All Images Courtesy of the Michigan State University Museum

For more information and gallery hours visit www.newamericansmuseum.org

A COMMUNITY BETWEEN TWO WORLDS: Arab Americans in Greater Detroit

Historical and contemporary photographs tell the story of the Arab American community in Southeast Michigan, and thus other large Arab American populations in the country. According to Sally Howell, co-curator of the exhibition, "This exhibition is the first to present the culture and history of Arab Americans to the mainstream public. Most Americans are unaware of the many contributions, both large and small, which Arab Americans have made to our society over the last 100 years. A Community between Two Worlds communicates some of this rich cultural history and gives visitors a sense of who their Arab neighbors are." Locally, nearly 30,000 San Diegans have origins from an Arabic speaking country.

SPONSORED LOCALLY BY:
Center for Islamic & Arabic Studies
SDSU

Pursuing Dreams,
Creating America's Future

2825 Dewey Road, Suite 102, San Diego, CA

MARK YOUR CALENDAR
One Museum • Two Exhibitions
February 21 — July 5, 2009

New Americans Museum
2825 Dewey Road • NTC Promenade, Liberty Station
FREE Admission & Plenty of FREE Parking • 619-255-8908

Directions: I-8, I-5 or Pacific Coast Highway to Rosecrans, left on Roosevelt, left on Historic Decatur to Dewey. Ample parking is available. Museum is on the corner of Historic Decatur and Dewey

Non-Profit Org
U.S. Postage Paid
Permit No. 751
San Diego, CA